Department of Political Science
Annual Report 20010-11

In 2010-11, the Department of Political Science conducted 129 classes, generating 9,361 student credit hours, and served 431 political science majors, 94 international relations majors, and a number of minors. The Department continued to work to strengthen the quality of its undergraduate programs, enhance student participation and active learning, and improve self-assessment. Besides dedicating substantial time and energy to teaching, Department faculty also contributed to scholarship and actively participated in professional and institutional endeavors. The following report briefly presents an overview of activities, and lays out plans for the coming academic year. The attached one-page profile summarizes data and serves as the appendix.

Departmental Affairs

- Building on the curriculum revisions of 2010-11, the Department produced new brochures and promotional posters, and officially launched the new minor in Political and Civic Engagement. Promotional activities included mailing materials to local high school counselors, posting announcements around campus, and sending out recruitment letters to all students earning a grade of ‘A’ in the introductory general education courses inviting them to consider majoring in political science or international relations.
- The Department approved a set of by-laws that in addition to incorporating a number of existing policies, such as the chair’s term, created a committee structure to strengthen internal faculty governance, and a workload policy designed to facilitate research. It established three standing committees: Budget, Institutional Effectiveness, and External and Student Relations committees. In addition, the Department formally created and recognized the position of Director of Political and Civic Engagement.

- Career Workshop (March 2, 2011)
- Special showing of Oliver Stone’s South of the Border (March 22, 2011)
- Public Service Workshop (April 7, 2011)
- Spring Picnic (April 23, 2011)
- Fall and Spring Newsletters

Assessment

- At the start of the year, the Department redesigned its Student Learning Objectives and Assessment Instruments contained in its Institutional Effectiveness Plan (IEP). Copies of the SLOs were provided to each member of the faculty and conspicuously displayed in the main office. As part of the new Institutional Effectiveness Plan, the Department adopted an Action Plan containing a number of initiatives, including the following:

- Individual faculty developed specific assessment instruments for their classes. For most, this involved designing and administering a survey to students dealing with specific aspects of at least one class. The information provides critical feedback to help faculty make adjustments to the design and conduct of their class. For some, this initiative also entailed a reflective analysis by faculty of how their specific course objectives contribute to the broader student learning outcomes of the Department.

- Working with the Institutional Effectiveness Committee, the Chair developed a rubric to review research papers from students in the Senior Seminar and students majoring in international relations. The review and assessment will take place over the summer.

- The Chair administered surveys to majors in the introductory level courses and the Senior Seminar designed to test attitudes regarding ethnocentrism and theory of mind. Results are pending.

- The Department began to move to a 3-3 teaching load to facilitate research, professional development, and more attention to courses. This move responds in part to the goal of promoting excellence in the classroom and research.

- The Department created a Student Advisory Council which met for the first time in the spring to offer a number of recommendations regarding Departmental matters. Among the suggestions were: more problem-based learning and hands-on activities like student-run court or political science game night, a research forum for students, more connections with criminal justice with field trips to hear court cases, a greater focus on careers, and open discussion boards.

- Dr. Langenbach redesigned the required internship assignments to strengthen the academic rigor of the internships.

- Both the political science and the international relations programs underwent their five-year external review. In both cases, the external reviewers found that the programs satisfied all criteria listed on the THEC checklist. The reviews praised the work of the faculty and outlined a series of recommendations to enhance the overall quality of the programs. These recommendations provide much of the framework for 2011-12.

Learning Outcomes

- The 2009-10 results on the major field test were disappointing. Average scores for both IR and PS majors fell below the 500 funding threshold. The average for IR majors was 499 and for PS majors 459.

- The average LSAT score for the 14 majors reported in October 2010 was 152. This was up from 149 in 2009.

- On the 2009-10 California Critical Thinking Skills Test (General Education Test) the overall mean score and scores in each category tested for IR majors (n=18) remained steady and above the college average. Scores for IR majors improved in the areas of evaluation and induction compared to the prior year, but fell in the areas of deduction and inference. For political science majors (n=78), however, the scores were near or slightly below the college averages and declined in all substantive areas tested.

- MTSU students (mostly political science majors) taking the Government/Political Science Praxis exam over the period from September 2009 to August 2010 performed well. The 14 MTSU students garnered a mean score of 715 (800 highest possible score), surpassing the average of 700 by all examinees (n=402). In addition, 13 of the 14 MTSU students achieved a passing mark compared to 14% of the entire group.
- A review of student evaluations from fall semester 2010 courses showed overall average department scores exceeding the college and university average in every area examined (presentation ability; organization and clarity; assignments and grading; intellectual and scholarly approach; incorporation of student interaction; motivating students; and effectiveness and worth). The department enjoyed its highest rating on the factors of assignments and grading, and intellectual and scholarly approach. At the individual level, six of the 15 full-time faculty enjoyed an increase in their weighted average compared to the Fall 2009, and six registered no change. Among the three faculty with the lowest ratings in Fall 2009, two of the three registered improvements in 2010. Evaluations of Adjuncts were also strong, with scores above the college and university averages.

Curriculum

- The Department offered 68 distinct courses in 129 sections or classes (Fall/Spring), including 10 on-line sections, and 5 special honors sections, and 66 internships, generating a total of 9,361 student credit hours.
- The Department launched a new minor in Political and Civic Engagement.
- Two new courses were taught for the first time this year. Dr. DiPaolo offered a section of PS 4850 Advanced Studies in Comparative Politics on Canadian Politics, and Dr. Franklin taught PS 3550 Democratic Participation and Civic Advocacy. In addition, the previous PS 4000 course was redesigned and renumbered as PS 3001 Research Methods in Political Science.
- The Department created and gained approval of a new courses: PS 4970 Undergraduate Research.
- PS 2010 American Government and Politics was renumbered to PS 1005 beginning in the fall 2011.

Student-Centered Learning

The Department continued to provide students with substantial learning opportunities outside the formal classroom. These included:

- 66 students participated in formal internships during the summer/fall/spring semesters generating 395 credit hours. The students worked in political campaigns, law offices, and community-based organizations. Six students participated in the Washington Center program, spending a full semester in an internship in Washington D.C., and four participated in the Legislative Internship program in Nashville. The internships were coordinated by Dr. Langenbach (public service and political campaign internships), Dr. Willis (pre-law internships), Dr. Carlton (Washington Center), and Dr. Byrnes (Legislative internship).
Numerous students participated in the Department’s Student Organizations and competed in regional and national competitions. In many cases, the students earned individual and team awards and recognition.

Awards/ Scholarships
- The Department awarded over $12,000 in Department Scholarships to students during the year.
- In the spring ceremony, the Department awarded the Norman L. Parks Award to Jenni Bewley, the C.C. Sims Award to Alison Carden, the John W. Burgess Award to Nathaniel Greene, the Jack Justin Turner Award to Nick Mackie, and Meritorious Service Awards to Nick Mackie, Lee Whitwell, Eric Bisby, Sam Keen, Charlie Burns, and Shaun Guffey.
- Kim Yarborough and Patrick Pratt (both IR majors) received Fulbright Scholarships. Ms Yarborough will be teaching in Spain, while Mr. Pratt will conduct research in Tanzania.
- Nick Mackie (IR major) received the 2011 Provost’s Award. During his tenure at MTSU, Mr. Mackie’s completed the McNair Scholars Program, and received a Critical Language Scholarship, the Gilman Scholarship, the Clinton Scholarship, the Dell Scholarship from the Susan and Michael Dell Foundation, and the MTSU Presidential Scholarship.

Alumni/Donations
- The Department sponsored a get-together of alumni at Homecoming and conducted a mass mailing to alumni updating them on Departmental matters and soliciting donations.
- From July 1, 2010 to May 20, 2011, the Department received $3,000.75 in donations to Department scholarship accounts and the Political Science Enrichment Fund.

Faculty
Department faculty had an amazingly productive year. In addition to offering 68 courses in 129 classes (Fall/Spring), including 10 on-line sections, and 5 honor’s sections, and 66 internships, and despite a heavy teaching and advising over 500 students, the 14 full-time tenured and tenure-track faculty devoted substantial time and energy to course improvements, scholarship, grant writing, and service to the Department, the institution, the profession, and the community. Among the accomplishments during the year:

Awards
Dr. Petersen received an Undergraduate Fellowship Office Exemplary Faculty Award from the Honor’s college, and Dr. Willis was recognized as Outstanding Advisor by the College of Liberal Arts.

Grants

Plans for 2011-12

The forgoing point to many of the priorities and tasks for the upcoming year. Among these are:

- Discuss and act on the recommendations offered by the external reviewers. These include: strengthening efforts to promote public service and active learning among students, including study abroad; designing programs and initiatives focused specifically on the international relations major; reviewing the international relations curriculum; adding a new faculty line; and improving advising.
- Enhance student research by promoting greater involvement in Scholars Week events and related activities.
- Continue efforts to improve our engagement with students outside the classroom and get students more involved. Building on the Student Advisory Council, this might include the creation of a political science and international relations club that can meet periodically to discuss issues of interest. The Department will also continue to organize workshops, sponsor guest speakers, films, and social events to help strengthen the sense of community.

- Improve external relations among friends, supporters and alumni with the creation of an External Advisory Board.
- Promote faculty research through reduced teaching load, internal and external funding, and by encouraging faculty/student collaborative research.
- Continue to improve assessment by expanding the individual course assessment program.
- Work with the Administration to add at least one faculty line, create the position of Program Coordinator and Advisor to improve advising, and add clerical support.
- Promote public service and the new minor in political and civic engagement.
